SPLENDID WORK OF COBOURG BATTERY

RUSHED FIRST TO QUEBEC, THEN TO VANCOUVER IN QUICK TIME.

(Special Despatch to The Globe.)

Ottawa, Aug. 16.—Word was received in the Militia Department tonight that the Cobourg battery had arrived at Point Grey, Vancouver, and had mounted its guns at the approach to the harbor. The battery has done a remarkably quick piece of work in the last week. A week ago Friday night the men were ordered to mount their four eighteen-pounder guns on the St. Lawrence below Levis, with a view to guarding the approach to Quebec against any raiding vessels. They reached the appointed spot from Cobourg on Saturday morning, and had their guns up the hill and mounted within a few hours.

That evening they were ordered to dismount the guns and proceed at once to Point Grey. The reason for the order was the doubt as to what had become of the Rainbow, and the fear in official circles here that the cruiser might have been sunk by one of the German warships on the Pacific. In that case there was almost nothing on the Pacific coast except the guns at Esquimalt for protection. It was known that the guns of the Cobourg battery had a range of 1,000 yards more than either of the German cruisers on the Pacific.

The battery had its guns entrained at Levis by midnight on Saturday, and went by special train in almost record time to Vancouver, where the guns are now mounted, and where the battery will remain for the present.
