

Nearly 400 German and Austrian waiters and cooks employed in Montreal are occupying remunerative jobs, while men capable of the same class of work belonging to the Allies, are out of employment. This is the complaint of English-speaking French and Italian waiters, who have decided to bring to the notice of the presidents and directors of the large hotels the present conditions, in an endeavor to have the Germans and Austrians replaced by subjects of the Allies.