

German Professor Missing.

The friends of A. R. Arndt, a German professor who is supposed to be locked up as a prisoner of war in Canada have been making inquiries from the military authorities to see if he is confined to any of the war prisons in Ontario. After making inquiries in Toronto they were also in communication with the military authorities in Kingston, as they feared he might be incarcerated at Fort Henry. They were informed that no man by that name is in the fort. It is stated that the professor came to Chicago during the month of July for the purpose of attending a convention, after which he visited friends in Vancouver. When the war broke out he had arranged to sail on the steamer Emperor but he did not and his friends have not heard from him since that date.