

JOHN DIETZ SENT TO ALIEN REGISTRAR

Came Over From Buffalo to Work on Armored Cars at Russell Motor Co.

HE MAY BE INTERNED

Said Germans Were Going to Drive the British From United States.

The case of John Dietz, charged before Squire Ellis with being drunk, is rather startling. Dietz, while drunk, opened an argument with two citizens on the Weston Road and declared that the Germans were going to drive the English and Americans out of the United States. Other pro-German sentiments expressed in a thick German accent, caused his arrest at the hands of Constable Knox.

In Court, Dietz, a typical loud-sturmer, fat and about 50 years of age, said:

"I am a German-American."
He further stated that he was employed at the Russell Motor Company as an engineer, having come from Buffalo to work on the armoured motor cars. Indeed, when arrested, he pleaded with Constable Knox to let him go as the work could not go on without him.

He was handed over to the Registrar of Alien Enemies, who will consider his internment. Squire Ellis remanded him for sentence on the drunk charge and ordered him into the care of Detective Maurer.

Soldier Will Enlist Again.

The William Thompson who stood up in the dock was the old timer Thompson. But he had grown a Van Dyke beard, and he was transformed to look like the poet of the same name—a startling resemblance. He was fined $1 and costs or 30 days.

Poor old Dr. John Case, now a mere wisp and shadow of a man, pleaded not guilty to a drunk charge.

"To-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow—
"Creeps out this petty pace from day to day,
"And all their yesterdays have lighted
"Their way to dusty death."

Quoted the old man, who knows more than his Shakespeare, who is indeed a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin.

He was remanded to Tuesday to jail.

James McGeehan, in his striped uniform, the man who lay drunk in the guard-house when his regiment sailed to Britain, was up to-day after a week in jail. The doctors found him sane, but worn with drink.

He was let go, and will try again to get into his Majesty's service.

Albert Sedgwick, through drink and other causes, has lost control of his nerves and has St. Vitus' dance.

ADMIRAL SIR HENRY JACKSON,
F.R.S.,

Who replaces Admiral Lord Fisher as First Sea Lord.

One of the jail doctors says he is demented and unsafe to be at large. But as the other doctor didn't agree Sedgwick was let go.

"I hate to do it," said the squire, as Sedgwick wobbled and shook his way to the door.

Laura Britton was fined $20 and costs or 30 days for vagrancy.

Sam Gatlen was fined $10 and costs or 30 days for the same.

Three Youths to a Jury.

Three young men, James McManus, George McClymont, and George Dowdall, were sent to a jury on the charge that they did each receive $40 of stolen money from Tom Leach, a 12-year-old boy. Young Leach stated: "I stole $180 from my father, W. H. Leach, and I gave McManus, McClymont, and Dowdall $40 each."

Bail of $500 was taken.

John W. Fisher was sent to a jury on a charge of assaulting and beating his wife, Ida Fisher.

Mrs. Fisher stated: "He struck me one terrific blow with his fist. It broke my arm. He was arrested, got out on bail, rushed backed and again attacked me and struck me on the broken arm, dislocating the fracture."

Pleading not guilty, Fisher was sent to a jury. But Colonel Derison refused him bail.

Mike Todochuck, an Austrian, was fined $5 for assaulting a Russian woman, and he will be interned.

On three charges of sneak-thievery, John Smith, Ed. Holland, and Frank Barrett were sent to a jury. Several women gave evidence, stating that the young men called to engage a room, and while in the house stole various things, in one case eight gold sovereigns.

"A Dirty, Low Business."

Thomas Glover, charged with keeping a common betting house at 1093 Bathurst street, a cigar store, was sentenced to 40 days in jail.

"Won't there be a fine?" asked Mr. T. H. Lennox. "No," replied Col. Denison. "There is no fine, and there never has been a fine, and they know it and they might as well stop it. It's a dirty, low, contemptible business."

Fred Whittaker, a newly-married man, who is now doing 90 days for theft, was convicted of breaking into 119 McCaul street, and as he has only done ten days, the same term was let stand.
