Tapping wires to secure military information and pulling wires to get out of consequent trouble are the suspicions that rest against a young man named Ripton, who is now confined in Fort Henry, at Kingston. He enlisted with one of the overseas battalions, claiming to be a Canadian. Now he claims to be an American, and friends across the border are endeavoring to secure his release.