

A moderate estimate of the value of the work being done by the interred aliens, it is believed, would be $1,500,000 per year. This includes the clearing of land, construction of roads and cutting of pulp wood at the experimental farms in the north, road work and bridge construction at Petawawa Camp, work in the National Park in Alberta, and road construction and park work in British Columbia.

Although it is costing a good deal to maintain the interment camps, there will be, therefore, a large amount of valuable work accomplished to show for the expenditure which was itself unavoidable.
