

Believed He Was As Young as Ever

The spirit animating Canadians is well told in the story of a Vancouver man, 65 years of age, and his efforts to do his "bit." Going to a barber this man got a clean shave, a massage and all the other tonsorial fixings calculated to make one young. Then giving his age as 45 he enlisted and was sent over to Victoria. His years were detected, however, and he was returned, but only to join another corps, passing another doctor, which he had no difficulty in doing, being a fine specimen of manhood. Here again the gentle patriotic deception was found out and he was discharged. Bound to do something, however, he has now joined the peace force and is at present guarding interned Germans at Vernon.

To make the delightful little story complete it may be stated that out of five sons of this veteran four are serving the Empire.
