

TWO YOUNG GERMANS

"DRESSED UP" IN KHAKI

Prisoners in Police Cells Donned Uniforms in Endeavor to Keep Warm.

The two young Germans held at the police station for the past week, suspected of having assisted in the escape of two Germans from Fort Henry, find it difficult to put in their time. They are wondering what will be done to them, and if they will be soon transferred to Fort Henry. They are great singers, and can sing both English and German songs in great style.

On Wednesday morning, the weather was quite chilly in the cells and in order to keep warm the Germans took possession of a couple of khaki coats, which had been left there by deserters and donned them. It was quite an odd sight to see two Germans dressed in khaki.
