

MORE BATTERY RECRUITS

79th Keeping Up Record With Five Daily

McConkey's Battery, the 79th, is still keeping up its record of five recruits a day, ten having signed up with the battery during the past few days. If it keeps up this excellent work, the places of the hundred men leaving with the draft next month will be filled before they leave Montreal. The following are the latest to don the uniform of the 79th: L. A. R. Berti, formerly paymaster with the Imperial Oil Co.; A. E. Budd, a qualified sergeant trumpeter; Clarence Gould, who has spent some months in service at Spirit Lake Camp; E. J. Miller, who held the position of orderly room sergeant at Valcartier Camp all summer, and since then has been on the headquarters staff in this city. Miller obtained a commission in the Royal Flying Corps, but on receiving the information that it would be many months before he would see service in France with this unit, he decided to join the 79th, and sail with the next draft, which leaves shortly for England; S. J. Williams, who graduated from McGill as a mining engineer, later taking a course at Culvert Military Academy. When the Mexican trouble started in 1914 he enlisted with the City Troop of Philadelphia and saw many months' service on the Mexican border; W. A. Merritt, H. F. Yates and J. Walker, who have been doing duty at Spirit Lake Internment Camp; J. Redmond, who has been acting in the capacity of shell inspector; R. Hibbard, Lachine; A. McMurray and W. J. Simpson.