

Tuxedo Boys Took No Part in Rioting

Sympathy with the objects of returned soldiers which crystallized into the anti-alien crusade, but deprecation of mob effort to obtain this object was expressed in a resolution passed by all ranks, patients and members of the staff of the Manitoba Military hospital at Tuxedo assembled at a meeting yesterday to discuss the recent riots. After a lengthy debate, a committee of six was appointed to co-operate with other returned soldiers' organizations.

The committee is composed of Sergt.-Major Fulker, Sergt.-Major Angus, Lieut. Ward, Pte. Bearfoot, Lanco-Corp. Sifton and Sergt. Lodge.

A resolution was passed involving the alien enemy question and other matters which resulted in the disturbance on Sunday and Monday. The men at Tuxedo were in no way to blame for the disturbance, it was stated, and practically none of them took part in it.

The resolution authorizes the committee to make a survey of the labor situation, ascertain the positions available and the possible vacancies which could be so made by the discharge of alien labor.

On the question of alien labor, a lively and free discussion took place.

A great deal of discussion took place with regard to the government's reconstruction and back-to-the-land scheme. It was resolved that the policy of the government in this matter be expedited.

The meeting recommended the use by employers of a flag similar to the service flag, which would indicate how many returned men the firm had in its employ. This matter was given some consideration, and different plans were proposed. It was finally suggested that each firm use its own method of displaying the number of returned men it employed.

An important question brought up was that of the words "Discharged as medically unfit" on a man's discharge certificate. It was felt that this handicaps the soldier in procuring work, and often places him in a wrong position with regard to his capabilities.
