
ALIENS FLOCK TO REGISTER.

Alien enemies are obeying the call of the registrar, and seem to be quite eager to get their names down. The registration office on Adelaide street west is besieged daily, a crowd of men being jammed against the office door yesterday like the entrance to a popular show. A glance over the list of names showed one "John Williams." He was not a Welsh alien. His real name was Johann Willm, and he came, not from Cambria, but Austria. One rabbi registered yesterday.

BUSY ON HIGHWAY.

Although the wintry weather continues severe, the Toronto-Hamilton Highway Commission is not relaxing its efforts on the inter-city road, but on the contrary was able yesterday to add another gang of fifteen men to those already at work on the Lorne Park section. Difficulties in regard to the location of the line at different points are being gradually adjusted, which makes it possible for more men to be put on the work. There was comparatively little time lost last week, and during the coldest days all the men who turned up were sent out on the road.
