

A squad of Provincial police, accompanied by an interpreter, raided a house just outside the town of Sandwich and took into custody a number of Austrians who, it is believed, were to have been taken across the Detroit river in rowboats.