

1 Girl, 3 Lovers, a Fight, and the Canadian Wins

TORONTO—One girl and three lovers.

Theoretically she may be considered lucky; practically it is a bad deal. In the little village of St. Martin, two Austrians made love to the same girl. Attention was divided between them and they were content to have it so. One day, however, a French Canadian came upon the scene. Love at first sight it may be called, but the situation of the girl was all for the Frenchman.

The two Austrians became wrathful and abided their opportunity. It came and they "beat up" the Frenchman in no uncertain manner. Disappointed in love the Austrians became dangerous and for a time lead the little community a merry dance. They broke into houses and made themselves objectionable in many other ways.

Complaints were made to the alien registration bureau and Special Officers Lapointe and Mahoney were dispatched in a buggy to St. Martin. The two Austrians were brought back and ordered interned for the remainder of the war by Mr. C. G. Ogden, K.C., the registrar.
