

HUSBAND SLAUGHTERED BEFORE EYES OF WIFE

SHE ESCAPED AND HAS MANAGED TO RETURN TO BRANTFORD—IS PENNILESS.

Brantford, Jan. 15.—In 1914 Johann Bagdasarian and his wife, Armenians, returned to their native land, arriving there just before the war broke out. They were caught by the Turks before they could flee. Bagdasarian had on him two drafts issued here, for fifty and fifteen pounds respectively. The Turks took these on promise to spare his life, but afterwards slaughtered him before his wife's eyes. She, with many thousands of others, was driven to the interior by the Turks, but fled to the mountains and thence made her escape to Russia, finally reaching Norway. She has just returned to this city penniless, and an effort is being made to have the bank drafts refunded to her, as it is not thought that they will be cashed for the Turks.
