

J. SCHMIDT HADN'T REPORTED SINCE WAR BROKE OUT

Three more young men were up before the police magistrate yesterday under the military service act.

Folco Fiortino, of Italian birth, but a naturalized Canadian, was the first one called, and said he did not know that he had to report, and the military representative was satisfied the young man was not trying to evade military duty. He was told to go and report at the armory at once, and did so.

Conrad Barry was an absentee. He had been ordered to report at Hamilton in February, but failed to do so. He was handed over to the military authorities.

J. Schmidt, a German, has been in Canada about five years, but was going under the name of Smith, and had been employed in the Sault. When arraigned before Magistrate Elliot yesterday it was shown that Schmidt had never reported since the war broke out. A fine of $500 or two years in Kingston penitentiary was the sentence imposed. He paid the fine.
