Thanks are due to the Toronto Star by the people of the North for having sent a special representative to Kapuskasing to investigate the conditions there as they really exist.

The report giving the result of the investigation as it appears in Saturday's issue of the Star, shows on the face of it that the representative approached his task with an open mind and perfectly unbiasse, and is a complete vindication of the real worth of the enterprise inasmuch as it clearly indicates that wherever there has been failure it has been purely individual and not the fault of the scheme.

This fair exposition of the real conditions should go far to allay any distrust that has been fostered by politicians in purely partisan spirit to the detriment of the general development of this district, but this is hardly enough. The discontented and misfits of the Kapuskasing colony should not be permitted to further foment trouble and give this country a black eye, but should at once be taken away from there and given opportunity to try something else. Only those capable of adapting themselves to pioneer life should be allowed to take up pioneering. This of course is merely common sense.
