

Some Cold at Jasper Park

Engineer J. T. Child returned home last week, finding the weather too severe at Jasper Park to accomplish anything. The thermometer registered 56 below zero at that popular playground and it was utterly impossible to work in the out-of-doors. Mr. Child plans to go back there next month, if the weather moderates sufficiently to permit of going ahead with the bridge construction.

A rancher was lost in a blizzard, found by B.C. Mounties in a semi-unconscious condition and brought in. He was so badly frozen that it was found necessary to amputate both arms and both legs.
