Corporal Andrews Says the Interned Men Are Well Behaved

Corporal J. B. Andrews, formerly of the 3rd Battalion, who returned from abroad, as he was suffering from weak heart and rheumatism, and who is well known locally on account of recruiting services, has returned from Kapuskasing Internment Camp, where he was serving under Lieut. Long as inspector of prisoners' gangs. Andrews brings the compliments of the "boys" to The Daily News, which paper, he says, is regularly enjoyed at the camp, and states that everything is progressing splendidly there. Over 1,400 alien enemies are interned there and they are guarded by 115 soldiers, who are in the best of health and good spirits, and enjoy their work.

Colonel Royce is in charge of the camp and is ably assisted by Captain Sidney Small and Lieutenant Long. Corporal Andrews says they do everything they possibly can to help both soldiers and prisoners along and have endeared themselves to all at the camp as a result. Andrews was two months in the camp and his duty consisted of visiting the various prison gangs at their work. To do this he had to travel on snowshoes and covered about fifteen miles of country daily.

Prisoners Work Hard.

The prisoners have been working hard clearing up timber land, with the result that over 20,000 logs of timber are awaiting the sawing-machine, part of which has already been installed, and which will be ready for use next week. The land cleared away is to be used by the Government for experimental farms, and it is expected that McPherson Township, which is close to the camp, will go ahead by leaps and bounds when everything is ready.

Andrews intends to secure work at the Armadillo, and is offering his services to speak at Sunday night recruiting meetings, if needed.
