

WARNING TO GERMANS.

The British and Canadian reputation for great leniency and general liberality of thought toward enemy nations, has produced a doubt-cast thought in the minds of many Germans who are residents of Canada. They have been foolish enough to openly declare their sympathies.

We feel it our duty to warn such people that the temper of the people is undergoing a great change.

The sinking of the Lusitania showed that no mercy can be expected where anything or anyone stands in the way of any German plans.

The outrages at Walkerville show that plots have been hatched practically at home for the destruction of things Canadian.

This brings matters too near home, and the public says that leniency has gone far enough.

There are thousands of Germans in Canada who are absolutely innocent of wrong sympathies and wrongdoing. They may have to suffer a little because of the actions of their fellow countrymen. We would ask them to be patient under trial.

Enemy sympathizers, however, can look for no leniency in the future. Too many Canadians have been killed; too many are now going to the front, for any weak-kneed tolerance in the future.
