

STOPPED SUSPECTED GERMAN SPIES

Evidence of the careful watch Canadian officials are keeping on the movement of strangers at the border is given by the detention here of the two Spanish airmen who are at present in Toronto buying flying machines. The representatives of the Spanish and navy went over to the Falls from Toronto sight-seeing, and were returning from the United States side when the customs officers held them up as suspected German spies. The airmen have not a fluent command of English, and it was an hour before they could establish their identity and proceed on their journey.
