

GERMAN AT THE FORT.

Gives Special Orders and Cooks His Own Meals.

The majority of men are particular about what they eat, and how it is served to them. Among the German prisoners of war at Fort Henry is a man who is very particular in this regard, and as he is a man of means, he orders a special bill-of-fare for himself, and acts as his own cook. As he has the money to pay for everything, the authorities have taken no objection. The prisoner gives his orders, they are filled and that is all there is to it.

On Friday, a local grocer benefited to the tune of $7.75, as the result of a special order given by the German, who has a taste for good things.
