Joynson-Hicks Asserts London
German, in Touch With Krupps, Has Sons as Special Constables

London, Nov. 12—William Joynson-Hicks, Unionist, in the House of Commons today reflected the widespread anxiety concerning the presence of German spies in this country. He said there was a German in London who had been in touch with a German statesman and the firm of Krupp, and that two sons of the London agent of that firm had been sworn in as special constables in London. These men, Mr. Joynson-Hicks added, might be estimable, but they would be better under lock and key.

There are 70,000 alien enemies in the country, the speaker continued. It was certain that signals had been given the German submarines to enable them to torpedo British ships, he said, and that by some means a chart of the mined area had reached the Germans. Otherwise, Mr. Joynson-Hicks declared, the German squadron could not have got so near Yarmouth.

Reginald McKenna, the Home Secretary, in reply to Mr. Joynson-Hicks, said the Government must be careful that injustice was not done any person. He said that, at any rate, his department in this matter was acting under the instructions of the military authorities.

ORGANIZED LABOR'S COURSE.

Arthur Henderson, the Labor leader, upon the continuation of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, said that organized labor felt that the only course now open was to go straight through with the war, until complete and final success crowned the allied efforts.

When the end came, he said, labor would use its powerful influence towards a settlement on the lines of true nationalism and democracy. The Government's White Paper on the question of allowances for those dependent upon soldiers obviated the necessity for him to go further on that subject, but he still felt that recruits were being improperly treated. He cited cases where wives, he said, had been insulted by officers of relief associations.

Mr. Henderson also inquired if the Government was in a position to tell more about the escape of the former German cruisers Goeben and Breslau from the British Mediterranean fleet, and whether there existed a prior arrangement for the sale of these cruisers between Germany and Turkey.
