

HUNS IN CAPE BRETON JUBILATE.

The North Sydney Herald Prints
a Remarkable Story About
"Enemies in Our Midst."

The North Sydney Herald is informed on the very best of authority that right in our midst, to be exact, midway between this town and Sydney Mines, there dwells a colony of Germans and Austrians who on every occasion the loss of an Allied vessel or the reverse of Allied arms is reported, give vent to their feelings by outward signs of joy and indulge in manifestations of ecstasy that could not be outdone were they living in the very heart of the Hun territory.

Only the other night, according to our informant, when the wires told of the murderous act of the Hun underwater enemy, and when many valuable innocent lives went to an untimely death, these foreigners gave vent to their feelings by the flying of flags, display of bunting and discharge of firearms; in fact had a celebration that was indeed worthy of a better cause.

So brazenly offensive were these celebrations acclaiming German victories that an official of the Government made known the fact to Ottawa as well as to the commanding officer at the Archibald avenue barracks. But so far as can be learned nothing has been done. In justice to the officers and men of the 94th, it must be admitted they are powerless to act unless advised by the military authorities at Ottawa. But why the latter are not taking at least some steps to prevent a recurrence of these very offensive and annoying and insulting demonstrations by a lot of foreigners who are enjoying the freedom and protection of the British flag, and growing rich in one of the freest countries in the world, is beyond the ken of the average citizen.

In fact it was rumored that prominent citizens were about to take the matter in their own hand, and the next time such an outburst of Hun joy took place, citizens would prevent it. This is no place for enemies of the great British cause, and the sooner the military authorities at Ottawa take some steps to subdue any further outbreaks as above reported, the better for all concerned. Cape Breton has samples left of the breed of manly men that have already gone forth to the battle field, and even though their heads are tinged with grey, they will not tolerate an above referred Herald.
