

It has become a matter of frequent occurrence in the Old Country since the war broke out for British citizens possessed of German names to change them, and among recent announcements of this nature in the London Times is a notice from Dr. Schmitz, formerly of Vernon, that he has renounced the name of Schmitz and taken that of Macdonald.