

Bankhead Miner Interned

Mike Lovak, an Austrian miner at Bankhead, was examined by Supt Clarke last week and ordered interned until the end of the war. Lovak, who has worked in the Bankhead mines for the past two or three years, filled up with booze and boasted that he had received a communication from the Austrian consulate at Seattle offering him $1,500 to blow up the Stony creek bridge on the C.P.R. main line. Three witnesses testified to having heard him make this statement. Lovak bore an excellent reputation as a miner and a mind-his-own-business fellow until booze loosened his tongue. He has nearly $3,000 to his credit in the local bank.