

One hundred more Germans and Austrians registered at police headquarters on Thursday and supplied the police with full particulars as to their place of residence, business, etc. Most of them expressed gratification that there was no danger of their property being confiscated as long as they committed no acts that might be construed as belligerent.