Ernest Neef and Gerhard Wolf, Germans, both from Toronto, were arrested last night by the immigration department at the Grand Trunk depot, at Niagara Falls, Ont.

Neef and Wolf each stated that they were on their way to Niagara-on-the-Lake. Neef said he was going to that place for the purpose of obtaining employment on a fruit farm, in order that he could get together sufficient money to afterwards go to Gettysburg, Pa., to study as a mining engineer. Neef had been unable to serve in the German army on account of a gland trouble, and was paroled by Chief of Police Kennedy in Toronto.

Wolf had served in the German Foot

Artillery Regiment in Berlin for one year (1912 to 1913) and came to Canada on May 23rd, being a reservist. He stated that the reason he was on his way to Niagara-on-the-Lake was for a return trip to see the Falls, but from letters found in his possession it was found that he was going to Gettysburg to study as a preacher, and in view of the fact that he had broken his parole and was attempting an evasion by crossing to Niagara-on-the-Lake, he was confined in the armory together with Neef, who had of course also broken his parole.

It appeared that Wolf's father was a member of the German government, and both Neef and Wolf appeared to be educated and well dressed.
