

Sixty-three Aliens At the Barracks

Prisoners Enjoy Life, in Spite of Being Deprived of Liberty

There are now 63 aliens interned at Stanley Barracks, and they are apparently enjoying life, even though deprived of their liberty. In the matter of food, exercise and good comfortable quarters, they are quite satisfied with their treatment and all of them are in good health. The large enclosure in which they take their exercise is surrounded with strong wire and guarded, when occupied by the foreigners, by members of the Highland guard. In this space they play various games. New suspects, before being added to the imprisoned circle, are given a bath and a dose of calomel.