

RUSSIANS SEEKING TO JOIN COLORS

Formation of Russian Corps For Next-Contingent is Being Considered.

Ottawa, March 25.—So many Russians are volunteering for service in different parts of Canada that the formation of a Russian corps for the next Canadian contingent has been suggested by Ottawa officers. A particularly large number of Russians have tried to enlist here, but they cannot be enlisted because of inability to speak English, and there have been similar experiences elsewhere. Many of the Russians have had experience in their home armies.

"These men would make splendid soldiers," declared a high officer today, "but they cannot understand orders in English. I am quite sure that in Canada two or more battalions of them could be recruited and Russian officers secured when they get on the other side."

The suggestion has been forwarded to the Militia Department.