

HUNGARIANS ARE REMANDED

Many Nationalities Who Have Been Loyal Given Freedom.

London, June 4.—Telegraphing from Budapest The Morning Post's correspondent says:

"As a reward to Hungary's multifarious nationalities for their war services, the Government has drafted a bill modifying the restrictions under which many of these peoples hitherto have lived. The bill allows the Slav population considerable freedom, permits the use of the national languages in schools and courts and provides for a new Rumanian University at Kronstadt. The bill has been received with violent opposition by the aristocracy.

"It is said that audiences granted by the Emperor to the Hungarian minority leaders were attempts to form a Coalition Cabinet."
