

Victor Subosits, a well-known and prosperous Hungarian merchant at Welland, admitted sending money to Austrians and Hungarians for relatives, through a United States banking house and was sent to a jury for trial.