

German, but Canadian.

John W. Martin, before court as an alleged vagrant, declared that he was a German, but that he had lived in Canada thirty-six years. "But I am a Canadian," protested the accused. He was allowed to go, having being previously examined by the Chief of Police.

"Guess he is a little irritated over the way things are going lately," commented the Bench.

The police hint that Martin has been talking a little too freely amongst his neighbors.
